Introduction

With a distant thump and a billow of grey the cannonball approach the thin woods and the slope behind them, its force expended in the effort of crossing more than a thousand yards in the clear morning air. It burst through the green leaves and branches, splintering a dew covered trunk and then vanishing from view into the invisible clearing beyond. The cheers of the Elf gunners mingled with the sound of thousands of Elven feet marching in perfect order in the distinctive blue tunic columns that had won the tyrant Mordred and his Ferach Imperial Armee the largest Empire that Valon had ever known. Only a few lands like Catalucia held out, and few enemies like the accursed Albion scum in their stubbornness. They never knew when they were beaten; they never knew when to kneel to the inevitable.....

The Boyos of Taffsea sing in harmony as they kill the enemies of Kyng Gorge III. Alongside the Orcs of Albion and the Rats of Joccia the Hobgoblins make up some regiments in the Army of Albion and fight with passion. Excellent infantry and also light cavalry the Boyos like nothing more than a fight against huge odds. They are about a tenth of the line regiments of Britorcn.

Special Rules

Choir -

The Taffsea are known for their love of singing and so take their choirs into battle with them these voices will instantly raise the morale of any Taffsea nearby.

When activated the Choir can spend 2 action singing, the effect of this is to remove 1D6 shock from a Taffsea group or formation within 12"
